

PG BISON'S FOOTPRINT

ADDING VALUE TO A RENEWABLE AFRICAN RESOURCE

PG Bison actively strives to operate in an environmentally responsible and sustainable manner. Operating within these sound principles leads to a stable and consistent product supply, allowing our Customers to plan and develop with confidence.

As a mark of PG Bison's commitment to sustainability, our Southern Cape¹ and North Eastern Cape Forest² (NECF) plantations are certified according to the requirements of the Forest Stewardship Council (FSC), which promotes responsible plantation management. Our Ugie particleboard plant, nestled in the NECF, holds an FSC Chain of Custody Certificate³ and is therefore able to supply BisonBord® and MelaWood® under the FSC mark.

Our two other board manufacturing sites, where possible, also procure fibre from FSC-certified plantations, as well as use recycled material, such as post-industrial waste and forestry waste, like thinnings. Post-industrial waste consists of wooden chips from waste such as old, broken pallets and mine props as well as the waste from other wood-working facilities, such as furniture factories.

PG Bison's investments in forest plantations together with specialised, low-impact harvesting equipment and timber transport systems and establishing our state-of-the-art particleboard plant ensures vertical integration and greater control of our processes and our sustainability.

PG Bison is also the proud co-sponsor of the Endangered Wildlife Foundation's Crane Conservation Working Group. By taking cognisance of our current environmental conditions and directing our efforts accordingly, we can contribute positively towards the environment of tomorrow, while ensuring the long-term sustainability of the Company.
